

A Train Run Down an Embankment for Purpose of Robbery.

St. Louis, June 4.—As an express train on the St. Louis and San Francisco railway, late the Atlantic and Pacific railway, reached a point one and a half miles west of Wood End station, one hundred and fifty-five miles from St. Louis, at 9.30 o'clock last night, the engineer saw some obstruction on the track, and instantly applied the air brakes, but too late, for on reaching the spot where the obstruction was the engine and baggage car left the track and plunged down an embankment of forty feet. Samuel Richardson, the fireman, and Dr. E. L. Atkinson, who was on the engine, was instantly killed, and Frank Cotton, the engineer, was so badly injured that he died in two hours.

Conductor Wilson started for another engine, and on the way heard a pistol shot, and a ball passed through his hat. Several other shots were fired, and passengers say that they saw five men standing near, who were revealed by the flashes from their pistols, but no one was hit. Two balls passed through the baggage car.

On examining the track it was found that two fish bars connecting the rails on both sides of the track had been disjoined, and the ends of the rails moved so that the train would run down the embankment. The shots fired and the men seen leave no doubt that this was a diabolical scheme to run the whole train down the bank, rob the express car and plunder the passengers. That it was not carried out may be explained by the fact that the night was intensely dark, that it rained heavily, and that the train was only running at a speed of about ten miles an hour. No clue to the perpetrators of the fiendish act has been found.

"CANKER IN THE BUD."

You watch its development with expectant solicitude—the choice, exquisitely-moulded bud which promises to unfold with the perfect flower. You perhaps think how it will adorn the drawing-room vase, and anticipate the showing it to your flower-loving friends. But some morning you find its head drooping, its fragrance fled, and an ugly purple spot on one of the delicately-tinted petals. It is the poet's "canker in the bud." How often the loathsome canker blights the cherished "infant blossoms" in our household gardens—those human buds which give earnest of a brilliant future. The noisome canker, so long concealed—scrofula—at length reveals its dreaded presence and to our bright hopes succeeds the most agonizing fear, for we know the fatal sequel it portends—pulmonary consumption. It is estimated by eminent medical authorities that at least one-fifth of mankind are afflicted with this insidious malady. But its ravages are so secret, that even its victims are unaware of its presence until it suddenly discloses itself in some of its myriad and oft-times fatal forms. A slight cutaneous eruption is often the only indicator of its presence. The only means of exterminating this disease from the system is by a thorough course of constitutional treatment. This treatment must fulfill three indications, namely, promote nutrition, alter or purify the blood, and arrest disorganization of the tissues and the formation of tubercles. No more efficient alternative can be employed for these purposes than Dr. Pierce's Medical Discovery. While imparting strength and tone to the digestive organs it cleanses the blood and heals the diseased tissue. Test its virtues ere the deadly canker has blighted the life you prize.

A Wife's Suicide.

HAWLEY, Pa., May 31.—Mrs. Daniel Kunzerman cut her throat with a butcher knife between the hours of 2 and 3 o'clock this morning. On the evening previous, while lady callers were at her house, Mrs. Kunzerman complained of her head feeling strangely. At their usual time the family retired, and were soon lost in sleep. At about 3 o'clock Mr. Kunzerman was awakened by their little child, who was lying by his side, and reaching to the opposite side of the bed to awaken his wife, he discovered that she was not in her usual place. The bed was cold, showing that she had been up some time. Mr. Kunzerman immediately arose and went to search for her. He soon ascertained that the outside doors were all locked, but that the door leading to the pantry was open. At the foot of the cellar steps he found his wife in a sitting position, with a gash across her throat nearly six inches in length, entirely severing the windpipe, and a large butcher's knife by her side. About two years ago this family lost by death three interesting children, and thereafter the mother was not herself.

The first of the drink-registering apparatuses, which a new law says must be used in all Virginia bar-rooms, has been put in operation in Richmond. It is a wooden box, about a cubic foot in size. On one side is a crank, and on another dial like those of a gas meter. The bar-keeper turns the crank once round at every sale of a drink, a bell strikes, and the dial registers one. The object of the device is to determine the amount of tax to be collected, at the rate of one cent on every drink. Although a heavy fine may be imposed for neglect to use these machines properly, or for tampering with them in any way—and there are officers whose duty it is to detect such offences—the belief is that they will not answer the purpose, because drinkers will generally connive at violations of the law.
